Project: Pizza Operating System

Final Project Artifacts

For the final project I had the opportunity to work with Hector on building a pizza operating system. I could not ask for a better group partner, he helped build the entire backend system, not only that but he spent time explaining best practices in OOP when my understanding was lacking. He provided information on the best way to set up practices that made the design implementation of the project straightforward. It was a pleasure working with Hector. I would rate him 10/10 as a group partner. I built the front end of the system, but Hector made several key contributions, making sure components of the classes we discussed were able to be displayed to the user to provide the most robust experience possible. We also collaboratively worked together on various classes making the project come together in seamless fashion.
